Small Group Questions

1. If we know of someone who is still unrepentant of their sin after being confronted in the ways Jesus says, how are we to treat them personally? How can we still love on them and be there for them without them thinking we are okay with their choices?
2. How should the church address private, unrepentant sin?
3. Are many small groups prepared and willing to confront sin in one another's lives? Are fellowships that intimate within the Church? Do group participants intend/agree to be held accountable?
4. How should parents respond as children question what the Bible says about God's handling of justice and compassion in terms of consequences of sin and who gets what for the choices they make?
5. Is the concept of membership biblical or denominational?
6. Tell of a time you experienced confrontation that led to restoration in your life or someone else's.
